

How To Solve Your Biggest Problem.

The secret one.

You have a problem.

It's big and scary, and nobody knows how to solve it.

So nobody talks about it.

It's a secret.

It has to do with your company's most valuable asset: your information.

In fact, it has to do with the most important thing about that asset:

access to your information.

Simply stated, when you have information, you need to know who can do what with it.

Every second of every day.

And you need to know where every single person has access.

If you don't know who has access, you can't control your own information.

And if you can't control it, you can't trust it.

So.

Ask yourself a very simple, very fundamental question.

*When you can't trust
your own information,
how can your customers trust you?*

The image features a blue sky with white clouds on the left side, transitioning into a white background on the right. The text "Think about it." is centered in the white area.

Think about it.

The good news is that you're not alone.

Every person who uses Microsoft products to manage information has the same problem you have:

They cannot trust their own information.

The better news is that someone is doing something about your problem.

Some very precise, passionate German engineers noticed your problem.

They saw that it makes your business powerless and chaotic—and turns your most valuable asset into a liability.

They decided to solve it.

They decided to build intelligent, easy-to-understand, easy-to use software to solve it.

This software allows you to see every person and every group who has access to every piece of information in every hierarchy on every server in your organization.

And it enables you to control that access.

Until now, you had to go to Germany to get it.

Not anymore.

It's called 8MAN.

It gives you access and control,
as well as reporting and administration capabilities over all your information.

But that's not important.

8MAN also gives you immediate, unquestionable trust in your information, and in the people who have access to it.

That is important.

With 8MAN, you know that the appropriate people have the appropriate access.

And the appropriate people can control that access.

No training required.

If you can read and click, you will soon be giving the right rights to the right people.

So you can be confident that you know exactly what's going on.

8MAN will take about two hours to install and deliver results.

And even your most nontechnical people can quickly see and understand precisely what is going on.

On their own. No IT involvement necessary.

And no implementation and configuration expertise required, either.

Which means they can stop begging IT for reports—and do it themselves.

They can stop asking IT to change access rights—and do it themselves.

So they can start to take responsibility for the information they create.

And you can take responsibility for your information.

And when you have responsibility for your information, something amazing happens.

You can trust it.

They can trust it.

Everyone can trust it.

And everyone can trust you.

Meanwhile.

The IT people maintain full control, while delegating the politics of access rights to the business.

Because politics is not their business.

This concept is not a dream.

It is real, shipping software being used today by thousands of people in banking, manufacturing, government, and other organizations, both large and small—worldwide.

Now you can use 8MAN to build a network of trust that extends to everyone who depends on you and your information.

We'd like to talk with you about 8MAN.

We'd like you to see 8MAN.

And we'd like you to use 8MAN in your organization.

You'll instantly see that 8MAN reveals every person and every group that has access rights to every piece of information in your company.

It will show you the access rights of every single person.

It will give you full control.

We guarantee it.
